

To: Berry Alloc / BeauFlor Customers

March 10,2015

Re: Laminate Concerns – 60 Minutes

The 60 Minutes news story that aired on March 2, 2015 highlighted a major retailer's laminate products and elevated the issue of formaldehyde content and emissions in laminate products. We have received many inquiries since the broadcast from distributors, retailers, and consumers, all asking about compliance with formaldehyde content and CARB II levels.

The story focussed on laminate products produced in China. While most of Berry Alloc / BeauFlor's laminates are manufactured in Belgium and Norway, we do import some product from China. All of our laminate products sold in North America are tested in accordance with and complies with California Air Resources Board (CARB) Airborne Toxic Control Measure.

We have Certificates of Compliance from our manufacturer and have performed additional testing this past week on items currently in our distribution center. These tests have confirmed compliance with all regulatory requirements.

We understand the concerns expressed by our customers but can assure you that Berry Alloc / BeauFlor has in the past and will continue to provide flooring products that meet all proscribed safety standards.

We thank you for your continued support!

Sincerely;

Steve Roan

Sales Director North America

Berry Alloc / BeauFlor

BFS USA, LLC